Dilaudid is the brand name for hydromorphone, a semi-synthetic opioid analgesic. It's prescribed for moderate to severe pain, often in post-operative and palliative care settings. With a potency 6-8 times that of morphine, it's typically used when other pain medications have proven ineffective.

Dilaudid's main use is treating acute and chronic pain caused by various conditions, including:

- Post-surgical pain
- Cancer pain
- Neuropathic pain
- Inflammatory pain disorders

The starting dose for oral Dilaudid is 2-4 milligrams, every 4-6 hours as needed. However, this can vary significantly based on the individual's pain level, health status, and other medications. It's crucial to follow your doctor's guidance and not self-medicate.
