

What month are Southwest flights the cheapest? Step by step 2026 Guide

What month are Southwest flights the cheapest is a question nearly every traveler in the United States asks when planning affordable travel. Finding the best time to book flights with Southwest Airlines can lead to significant savings and more flexible travel options. Although prices fluctuate year round due to demand, holidays, and seasonal trends, certain months consistently offer lower fares for domestic travel across the US.

In general, the cheapest months to fly with Southwest tend to be January and September. After the peak holiday travel period in December, January often sees reduced demand, leading airlines to lower fares to fill seats on routes throughout the country. Travel in January, especially early in the month, can take advantage of these lower prices, which makes it ideal for budget conscious flyers. Similarly, September marks the end of the busy summer travel season. Families return to school and many vacationers wrap up their trips, which often results in reduced demand and lower fare offerings. If you're flexible with your travel dates, booking flights in September can provide significant savings for both domestic and regional routes within the United States.
